G. Invitations

Exhibitors can invite as many people as they want to visit the exhibition (not the conference) free of charge (the normal fee being 50 €).

In order to do so, we will provide you with a personalised document (in PDF-format), a sample of which can be found on the next page. You can either print this document and send it out by regular mail or you can send it electronically to the business relations you want to invite.

The procedure to be followed is: you gather the positive reactions and list them in an excel file containing company name, personal name and email address of all people who indeed want to visit the exhibition, and send it to us. We then will have their visitor badges ready for them at the reception desk of the event.

To be able to prepare the PDF-file we kindly ask you to send us your company logo, preferably in eps-format.

Port of Amsterdam

Amsterdam is an important junction in Europe for combined water, road, railway and air transport. The Port of Amsterdam is the 4th port of North Western Europe. With annual goods transshipments of 95 million tons, the Port of Amsterdam plays a crucial role for European business. The infrastructure of Amsterdam and its port ensure that European markets are easily accessible, often within a few hours. The proximity of the sea, the many connections with the hinterland and the short distance to Amsterdam Airport Schiphol are among the favourable conditions for optimal logistics and distribution.

Over one third of all goods transported to and from Amsterdam takes place through inland shipping. The port is close to the Rhine. This way, both industrial and consumer markets in the Netherlands, Germany, Austria and Switzerland can be served quickly and efficiently. Also there are inland shipping services with European destinations in Belgium and France. The port of Amsterdam stimulates transport by inland waterways to enforce a faster and cleaner logistics chain. The port is taking various initiatives to reduce road transport and promote transport over water and by rail. Besides to European destinations, the capacity of the waterways between Amsterdam and other inland regions is sufficient to easily accommodate the growth of inland transportation by water. For instance, the Amsterdam-Rhine canal can handle twice as many barges as they handle today. The water connections with Almere and the Northern part of the Netherlands are excellent and the IJsselmeer offers fast connections with the Northern provinces.

A smart Cargo Hub

The City and the Port of Amsterdam have the intention to become one of the most sustainable ports in Europe in 2020. A major port means major responsibilities to the environment. The Port of Amsterdam is committed to sustainable energy and it promotes environmentally friendly transport. The port vision for 2020 commits to reducing road transport from 53% to 45% in favour of inland navigation from 43% to 49% and rail transport from 4% to 6%. In order to create a healthy balance between volume growth, transshipment, employment and a better modal split the port will continue to invest in infrastructure, inland terminals and hinterland connections.
